In case you hadn't guessed, Sandy Bay is indeed a very sandy beach! Backed by high cliffs the beach is around a mile in length and set in what feels like a secluded bay. However, towards low tide the beach becomes a continuous stretch of sand reaching all the way to Exmouth nearly two miles away. The cyan coastline with shiny teal rock pools is very popular in Devon. In the sea people find lucky things like seashells and fossils.

Please come to Devon to see the amazing views.
